In his book, "How Muslims Get Jesus and Islam Wrong," author Dr. David Wood presents a comprehensive analysis of the Islamic view of Jesus and Islam. Wood argues that the Islamic view of Jesus is based on a number of misunderstandings and that the teachings of Islam are often contradictory and illogical.

The Islamic View of Jesus

According to the Quran, Jesus was a prophet sent by God to guide the people of Israel. Muslims believe that Jesus was born of a virgin, but they do not believe that he was the Son of God. They also believe that Jesus was not crucified, but that he ascended into heaven alive.

Wood argues that the Islamic view of Jesus is based on a number of misunderstandings. First, Wood argues that the Quran's account of Jesus' birth is not supported by historical evidence. Second, Wood argues that the Quran's claim that Jesus was not crucified is contradicted by the historical evidence.

The Teachings of Islam

In addition to his critique of the Islamic view of Jesus, Wood also critiques the teachings of Islam. Wood argues that the teachings of Islam are often contradictory and illogical. For example, Wood points out that the Quran teaches that God is all-powerful, but it also teaches that humans have free will.

Wood also argues that the teachings of Islam are often violent and intolerant. For example, the Quran teaches that unbelievers should be killed. Wood argues that this teaching is incompatible with the teachings of Jesus, who taught that we should love our enemies.

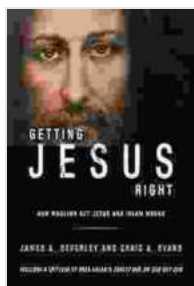

In his book, "How Muslims Get Jesus and Islam Wrong," Dr. David Wood presents a powerful critique of the Islamic view of Jesus and the teachings of Islam. Wood argues that the Islamic view of Jesus is based on a number of misunderstandings and that the teachings of Islam are often contradictory and illogical.
