

When You Feel Like Strangling The Patient: A Doctor's Real-Life Tales From The Front Lines of Critical Care

In When You Feel Like Strangling the Patient, Dr. Michael Palmer shares his experiences from over two decades of practicing critical care medicine. This book is an unvarnished, brutally honest, and often irreverent look at the realities of life and death in a critical care unit.

Palmer tells stories of patients who have tested his patience, his skills, and his very humanity. He writes about the challenges of working with families who are grieving, and the pain of losing patients. But he also writes about the moments of joy and fulfillment that come with helping people through some of the most difficult times of their lives.
